Local and overseas universities.

SINGAPORE'S HEALTHCARE SYSTEM

PRIMARY CARE

The foundation of our healthcare system and the first line of care in the community is provided through a network of outpatient polyclinics and clinics run by private general practitioners (GPs) island-wide.

Polyclinics

Provide subsidised primary care which includes medical treatment, preventive healthcare and health education.

GPs

Provide preventive, acute and chronic care.

Family Medicine Clinics

Provide medical care with support services for chronic disease management.

Community Health Centres

Work with GPs to support patients with chronic illnesses within the community.

HOSPITAL CARE

Singapore has eleven public hospitals comprising nine general hospitals, a women's and children's hospital, and a mental health hospital as well as nine speciality centres.

General Hospitals

Provide multi-disciplinary inpatient and specialist outpatient services, with 24-hour accident and emergency departments.

Specialised Hospitals

Provide specialised care for maternal and child health (KK Women's and Children's Hospital) and mental health (Institute of Mental Health).

Specialty Centres

Provide treatment for cancer, cardiac, eye, skin, neuroscience and dental issues.

Community Hospitals

Provide care for patients who require a period of recuperation, usually after discharge from a general hospital.
